Nacro directory of criminal justice mental health liaison and diversion schemes in England and Wales

Criminal justice mental health liaison schemes seek to work in a multi-disciplinary way to ensure that, where appropriate, offenders with mental health needs are diverted from the criminal justice system to care and treatment from the health and social care sectors. They also seek to ensure that, where a prosecution is to be pursued, relevant information about an offender's mental condition is made available to the courts and crown prosecution service.

Nacro has produced this directory with the aim of:

- raising the profile of the valuable work of these schemes with commissioners, potential referrers and defendants.
- ensuring appropriate referrals for assessment for defendants and offenders with potential mental health needs.
- increasing the communication between the schemes to aid them share practice and overcome any operational difficulties.
- assisting areas with no provision to benefit from shared practice and establish new arrangements.

Nacro's Mental Health Unit has been working to tackle problems faced by offenders with mental health needs since 1990. We work with government agencies at a national and local level to develop more effective ways to deal with offenders with mental health needs. We provide a range of services: information and advice; policy development and other consultancy services; and training. We also run a major annual conference on mental health and crime.

Nacro has a specialist mental health website (www.nacromentalhealth.org.uk) which offers information and support for practitioners and policy makers working in the field of criminal justice and mental health.
